Salazar, A. and Kunc, M. (2025) 'The contribution of GenAI to business analytics', Journal of Business Analytics, 8(2), pp. 79–92. doi: 10.1080/2573234X.2024.2435835.

2. In-text citations

- (NYC Mayor's Office of Management and Budget, 2024), or (NYC OMB, 2024) once the abbreviation is defined
- (NYC Open Data, n.d.)
- (Salazar and Kunc, 2025)
- (Benfell, [year]), using the lecture's year

3. Things to check

- Lecturer name and initial: "Benfell, A." came from an earlier template. Confirm it against the slides.
- Salazar and Kunc: Open the DOI and check the volume, issue, pages and title.
- Dataset publisher and date: Check the portal for a "last updated" date, and follow the Blackboard guide on whether the author is NYC Open Data or the Mayor's Office of Management and Budget.
- Access dates: Fill in the day you last opened each page.
- Lecture and lab manual: Ask your tutor whether teaching materials should be cited.
- Count: 5 references so far. The assignment asks for 10 to 15.

4. Harvard – Anglia style in brief

Based on general knowledge, not checked against Word's own output. The Blackboard guide takes priority.

- In text: (Author, Year). Up to three authors are named. Four or more use the first author and "et al.". A direct quote adds the page: (Author, Year, p. 5). No date: "n.d.".
- Journal article: Author, A. (Year) 'Article title', Journal name, volume(issue), pp. x–y.
- Book: Author, A. (Year) Title. Edition. Place: Publisher.
- Website or online report: Organisation (Year) Title. Available at: URL (Accessed: date).
- Dataset: Publisher (Year) Title [Dataset]. Available at: URL (Accessed: date).

5. Doing it in Microsoft Word

1. References tab → Style → Harvard – Anglia.
2. Insert Citation → Add New Source. Choose the source type and fill in the fields.
3. Under the "References" heading, use Bibliography → Insert Bibliography.
4. After any change, right-click the bibliography and choose Update Citations and Bibliography.
5. Compare one entry with the Blackboard example. If they differ, edit by hand.
